McGregor the Great jumped to the front at the start of the first hear of the 2:07 trot, but going around the first turn the son of Peter the Great went up in the air and King Watts grabbed the lead. McDonald took 'em to the quarter in 32 seconds and to the half in 1:04. On the turn into the stretch

Thomas had Mainlick at the stallion's wheel, but the gelding couldn't reach, King Watts winning in 2:08¼.

In the second heat of this race Mc-Gregor stayed on a trot and led the field from the first turn within 100 yards of the wire and then again went off his pins, King Watts taking the heat and race. Cox made a strong bid for the final, but was nipped at the wire by langth with McDonald riding easily.

In the second heat of this race McGregor stayed on a trot and led the field from the first turn within 100 yards of the wire set, 6-3.

Kelleher won the next two, 6-1, 8-6.

Howard O. Kinsey, of San Francisco, won from John Davies, of Leland Stanford University, 6-0, 6-2.

The other semi-finalist is N. W. Niles, of Boston, who won from the young Texan, Lewis E. White, 6-2, Abbedale was the contending horse strictly to his knitting in the first two heats, for Cox was on him in the stretch drives. Tonmy Murphy, with The Sherwood, was 3-3-4. Cox's stallion forced the Direct horse to step the stretch drives.
